[poem]

You wish for none to see?
From glances you want to be free?
What act could you wish to commit?
Your cauldrons fire so brightly lit!

Bring the eye of a griffin!
Be it plucked by your very own hand!
Else you'll soon be in your coffin!
Just like the spies of the wand!

And the scales of a snake so limb,
It will no longer be able to climb!
Don't forget when the English rooms,
where homes to the burning brooms.

To get the deal, one thing you steal.
Take from an eye, all known the names.
So yours will stay forgotten or feel,
the wrath you cause as raining flames!

Feedback welcome ;-)
